Summing Up Summer Health Rules
A general summary of rules for keeping the baby and other children and well during the summer
may be of help.

Watch changes of weather. Keep the child out of the sun on hot days and dress them very coolly.
On such days the baby's sunbath should be very short and given in the early morning.

On cool nights see that covers are plenty and chilling draughts do not blow over beds. Ask the doctor about baby hands.

Go out with the regular cooked meals. Children cannot live on salads, fruits and starchy foods.

Wash all fruits and vegetables and especially these: radishes.
Boil everything that comes in contact with baby's feet, bottles, nipples, utensils, and so on. Never touch the baby's face with your hands.

Keep formula, after being prepared,
in a cool place, below 50 degrees F.
Keep that very until used. The milk should be sterilized in the bottle. All bottles should be sterilized before being used.

Ask the doctor about continuing cod-liver oil through the hot weather.
Some children need it and some don't.

Get the doctor to give you directions
for carrying on the summer campaign. Get the doctor to give you

The Example of Joshua

Josh. 1:1-9; 2:1, 14.
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 1.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

A famous preacher once said, "God loves his workmen, but the work men love him." The figure of Moses looms so large upon the pages of history that one might have supposed that with his passing the greatness of the things that he achieved would have suffered. We should not, possibly, put Joshua, his successor, upon quite the same plane, for Moses in the story of the struggle for liberty was a man of almost superhuman proportions. But Joshua had the same source of help in the faith with which he relied upon the eternal God to help him.

All that we know concerning Joshua would have led us to think of him as a natural successor of Moses. He was among the 12 spies that Moses had sent to spy out the Promised Land, and was one of two who returned not only with a good report, but with an undiminished courage that urged immediate efforts to possess it. The 12 spies were all agreed about the desirability of the land, but 10 of its glens and its strongholds and its conquest as hopeless. Only Joshua and Caleb had a different view, in other than material forces, and believed that if the spirit of the Lord was indomitable they could achieve the conquest of the land. It should be remembered that in all these lessons we are living in a far-off age when national, and racial, and sectional rivalries were a matter of course. Even until comparatively recent times we have had the common recognition of the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils." If the men of one race or nation saw the country of another people as desirable they went ahead with plans for its possession.

Sometimes we imagine that we have learned much of this. We establish an International Court of Justice and a League of Nations, and we dream of a day when justice will rule between nations. The ideal is sound, and perhaps we are making more progress toward its realization than the cynic may admit. We are compelled, however, to recognize that a somewhat ruthless imperialism and expansionism still dominates in much of world affairs.

We must not, therefore, read these ancient stories from the standpoint of too high an ideal or with too critical a temper. We must read them rather in the light of the age from which they came, and the significant thing about them is that we can see in men like Moses and Joshua and Caleb, and in all the great figures, whom we shall be studying in the quarter's lessons, those who manifested a moral character and heroism far in advance of the times in which they lived.

That really is the measure of greatness of any man: not the distance that he may be removed from the highest ideal that we could set up, but the distance that he has progressed in advance of his own age. Joshua was a real leader. He stands before us as a man of intense devotion to his people and of devotion to the cause of right progress. He is not a self-seeker, but a man who seeks true social and righteous goals. The lesson that introduces him bids him also farewell. In its brief compass we have the story of his life and his labor.

Fifty per cent of the people listed in Who's Who have had a college education and 78 per cent have had a high school education.

Hair-Raising Discoveries of Science

HAIR-RAISING discoveries have been made in science, and they are reflected on the chin and lips of some of the prominent scientists who gathered at Chicago for sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. For instance:

Dr. Henri Peron of France displays the full-blown type of whiskers, with overlapping mustache ends.

White Dr. John J. Abel, retiring president of Johns Hopkins, favors the American type of close-clipped goatee.

Henri Bugeval of France adds a curl to his mustache ends, keeps the cheek whiskers short and the chin growth polished.

all over again is the responsibility a man usually must shoulder on his second climb," he said.

Jesse Lasky, a year ago one of the all-powerful figures in the motion picture industry, was telling me of the fight he is waging to regain the position of solid comfort he enjoyed for so many years as the producing head of the Paramount studio.

The motion picture industry gave Lasky everything he ever had in the way of wealth—and then took it all away from him. The millions he had taken out of the company started by himself and Adolph Zukor were poured back into it when poor business demanded them. But still more millions were needed. Banking interests came forward to finance the studio, and reorganize it. Soon Lasky no longer was with the company he had helped to build. His stock, bought at an average price of $65 per share, had to be sold for $1 a share.

But still he didn't give up. The once powerful man who had become one of the millions of unemployed, set out to find another job. But, except that which came from a few close friends, there was no sympathy for him as there was for jobless actors who tramped the streets. He had the reputation of being a wealthy man. Few seemed to realize that he had become practically penniless.

Lasky had two big advantages, however—the courage to start over again and the brains which would make him a valuable asset. He knew how to make pictures. Other studio executives recognized that fact. So, two months after he found himself jobless, he became an associate producer at the Fox studio. He no longer was the absolute head of a big studio. But he was starting to amass a second fortune and was doing the work he liked.

"There is one big advantage a man has in staging a comeback," Lasky said. "That is the confidence he has in what he is doing. When starting out the first time, about all you can do is feel your way along. The second time, you know from experience what should and should not be done.

"One of the outstanding lessons which came to me during my recent experience was the kindness and loyalty of other persons. The motion picture business usually is regarded as being quite heartless. I found it to be just the contrary. Players and directors whom I had started out, offered to work for me for nothing if it would help me to get started again. That one thing has made me a more considerate person, and thus a better producer."

"I'm Putting Up Jams and Jellies," Says President Roosevelt's Daughter

By Anna Roosevelt Dall

I'm so often asked questions about politics and like subjects, but, at present, my mind is miles away from these important world interests. Right now, a great portion of my interests is directed kitchen-ward: There's a reason, of course. I'm putting up some jams and jellies for winter, and having a grand time doing it. I'm surprised to discover that it isn't a colossal task at all, at least not with all the modern, scientific aids to duty. The food markets are filled to the brim with gorgeous ripe fruits of every description. Yet I can't use more than a few boxes when they're ripest and best. So I'm capturing these beautiful colors and delicious tastes in jellies and jams.

Quite as appealing as the marvelous ripe berries themselves are the attractive price tags on them. The price of food is a matter of concern to everyone these days. During my frequent visits to the White House I hear much talk of food economy and low-cost menus. Certainly one of the best savings to be effected now is in fresh fruits. If you know your science, jelly and jam making are no trouble. I wouldn't have time to make them if they were. Thanks to the short-bolt method and bottled fruit peels which insures jellifying, this ancient art has become one of the a.b.c.'s of kitchen accomplishments.

Here are some recipes to follow:

Huckleberry Jam
4½ cups (2½ lbs.) prepared fruit
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit peels
To prepare fruit, crush about 2 quarts fully ripe berries. Add juice of 1 lemon and grated rind of ½ lemon. Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 2 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in fruit peels. Skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 12 glasses (8 fluid ounces each).

Loganberry Jelly—Blackberry Jelly
4 cups (2 lbs.) juice
7½ cups (3½ lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit peels
To prepare juice, crush thoroughly or grind about 3 quarts fully ripe berries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit peels, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 glasses (8 fluid ounces each).

The circumference of the largest standing tree in this country is 39 feet.

Planting rice by airplane is now an established practice in the United States.

"Sunset Pass" at Saenger Saturday

All-Star Western Is Best of Zane Grey's Novels

Randolph Scott, Tom Keene, Kathleen Burke, Noah Beery, Harry Carey and Kent Taylor play the leading roles in Zane Grey's "Sunset Pass," thrilling story of the West, showing Saturday at the Saenger theater.

The picture, packed from beginning to end with excitement, centers around a cattleman's association deputy who finds that the man he is tracking down is the brother of the girl he loves. Keene plays the role of the deputy; Scott the man he is seeking; and Miss Burke, the latter's sister.

Highlights of the film is a raging prairie fire and the consequent stampede of a tremendous herd of cattle. And there is plenty of hard riding and shooting, all the way through. On the stage at 8:45 Friday night at the Saenger, the 18 local "tiny-tots" hold forth, all vying for first honors, a beautiful loving cup, in the "Childs Revue." On the screen for the last showing is Sylvia Sidney in "Jennie Gerhardt," a tale from the mighty pen of Theodore Dreiser.

BILIOUSNESS

"My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. "I remembered that at one time Black-Draught had helped me. I went to the drug store and bought a package and began taking it, at night. After then, I felt as well as anyone. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work, so I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

How to Torture Your Husband

The big game hunter was telling his stay-at-home wife all about his encounter with the Bengal tiger, how he had finally shot it. "Yes," wound up, "it was a case of the tiger or me."

"See that Ad up there at the Top of the Page?"

It's talking about Chesterfield—says it has a good reputation—What about it?

TALKING ABOUT the reputation of a cigarette—that's something new.

I know about reputation of people... reputation of some other things... and, come to think about it, I should say that CHESTERFIELD has an A-1 reputation.

You know, it seems to have real merit. To me, for a cigarette 'To Satisfy,' it certainly has to be made right; and then it has to taste right. I just don't like them strong... they just have to be mild.

CHESTERFIELD has what it takes to satisfy. That's what people say about it."

They have what it Takes to Satisfy Just Try them!
